

qualitative data. Web-based surveys were used to gather quantitative data, and focus groups captured the lived experience in qualitative data.

This project provides the community with concrete information and examples of how the university's commitment to strengthen service-engagement in the community is truly working to effectively address issues affecting early childhood in the community.

References

Cone, D., & Harris, S. (2003). Service-learning practice: Developing a theoretical framework. In Campus Compact (Ed.), Introduction to service-learning toolkit: Readings and resources for faculty (pp. 27-39). Providence, RI: Brown University Press.

Driscoll, A., Gelmon, S. B., Holland, B.A., Spring, A., & Kerrigan, S. (2001). Assessing service-learning and civic engagement: Principles and techniques. Providence, RI: Campus Compact.

Hedges, L. C. (2006). Children's achievement: What does the evidence say about teacher, pre-k programs and economic policies?. Evanston, IL: Institute for Policy Research at Northwestern University.

Hyson, M. (2003). Preparing early childhood professionals: NAEYC's standards for programs. Washington, DC: National Association for the Education of Young Children.

Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis Center for Service Learning. (n.d.) End-of-course survey. Retrieved from <http://csl.iupui.edu/assessment/classroomTools.cfm> Maeroff, G. (2006). Building blocks: Making children successful in the early years of school. New York: Palgrave Macmillan.

National Association for the Education of Young Children. (2010). 2010 NAEYC standards for initial and advanced early childhood professional preparation programs. Washington, DC: NAEYC.

Schoenfeld, R. (2004). Service learning guide & journal. Seattle, WA: Guide & Journal Publications.